Write the Chinese are pleading the defects in their own system of government as an ex- from the centre, and then toppled over with the wall on the opposite side. cuso for their inaction with regard to increasing the existing facilities for foreign trade and intercourse, the Japanese are. amending the like defects in their administration with the view of making advances in the direction of foreign progress. The repeated answer of the Chinese to applications for trading facilities in the interior of the country, has been that they would be unable to control foreigners, on account of the exterritorial rights which take them out of the pale of Chinese law. The rejoinder to this has always been: "Make your laws and your administration of them fair and reasonable and the exterritoriality privileges will be no longer necessary." But here the matter has ! ended. Wrapped up in old traditions, Chinarefuses even to attempt an amendment upon did some lively hitting occasionally, though a system of legal administration, which her caution was necessarily the rule. Mr. Carpenmore enlightened men are well aware is full ! of abuses such as must preclude her from but for 48. The score is as nuder :-being upon an equality with civilized nation in the present day. To set a side minor. matters, the practice of torture is, as mildly put by M. Giquer,-the eleverest foreign advocate the Chinese bave ever had-" pas de notre temps," and so long as this unfortunate little anachronism continues, so long will foreign nations be justified in prudently adhering to their exterritoriality privileges, and there will continue to be exactly what the Chinesein their short sightedness desire, an insuper able difficulty against the admission o, foreigners into the country.

.The Japanese, who are placed in precisely the same position by the treaty, have met the difficulty in a very different manner. De sirous, as it is only natural they should be that the supremacy of their own administration over all people within their territory should remain intact, they nevertheless recognise that, before they can claim this, they must make that administration reasonably sound and just, and so remove the very fai grounds for adhering to the exterritoriality privileges, that it would be unsafe to abandon them. They are making assiduous endeavours to introduce a code of laws after the foreign model, and to secure their being fairly and impartially administered. Simul taneously with this, they are organising system of policing for the maintenance of order in the various parts of the kingdom; and it is a significant circumstance that thi latter step is so popular, that it is being sup ported voluntarily by a large number of the leading residents in different parts. Having done this, they are, according to the last accounts, propared to declare the whole country open to foreigners, provided they submit to Japanese laws when in the interior, and the arrangement is on all sides admitted to be fair and reasonable. If the laws afford reasonable security to foreign-"ers, there can be no ground on which we can desire to uphold the anomaly of exterritoriality; but it is quite idle for any nation to complain of such an arrangement, unless its laws and administration come up to something like the average of the standard recognised in the present day, as absolutely necesgary for reasonable security and protection, would be sent to 10 days' hard labor,

So long as China continues unable to reform her internal administration, the anomaly of exterritoriality must continue; and although it would be unreasonable to expect her to public streets at Wanchi. effect such extensive changes as would be required, in a short space of time, it is clear that she cannot claim indefinitely the right her nephew, 21 years of age, was kidnapped to Macao by the first defendant, and she did not of refusing foreign nations the rights and privileges everywhere else accorded, on acthe first defendant since he came from Macao count of her own inherent defects. At the very least, she might be expected to make some honest endeavour to reform what no plausibility can represent as other than glaring defects. If a Chinaman of sound mind and average intelligence could be a desirable mode of procedure, provided any other could be found, something might be said even in excuse for continuing such a system, looking at it from a Chinese point of view; but the Chinese are at once willing to and resided in Taiwan-lane, Wanchi, admit that the system is utterly defective, and seen defendant before, but did not know bim. determined to make no effort to reform it.

Play commenced at about a quarter past 12, Mr. Deane and Sergeant Newton commencing to but for the Married Men. The former played a very good innings of 55, the bowling of the Bachelors being particularly weak, with the exception of Mr. Parkyn's, which was very steady throughout the innings. The fielding also was not by any means up to the mark, and the number of extras was surprising. Mr. Greig played steadily for his 19, the lunings closing for 132. Messrs. De Rusett and Woollaft went in first for the Bachelors, the former playing in good steady form, He was shortly joined by Mr. Carpenter, but the bowling was too strong for any rapid scoring. Mesers. BENJAMIN LUMLEY. THE SANDWICH ISLANDS. Bishop Stanley, late of Honolulu, sends to the Times some particulars relative to the Constitution of the Saudwich Islands. The old dynasty of the Kamehamehas ends with the late King, the fifth of the name, who, like his younger brother and predecessor, reigned about nine years. When Kamehameha IV, acceded to the throne in 1854, he found a Constitution existing based on universal suffrage; no property qualification for members of the Legislature required; two Chambers, the Upper, though nominally the liouse of Chiefs, being recruited from foreign residents who had shown any particular interest in the country. Except in a few unimportant points recognizing native Hongkong Pier and Godown Company .-- 80 ideas and usuges, it was a close copy of the Constitution of any State in the American Union, the King representing the governor of the State. To this Constitution, if not the work at least due to the influence of the American Independent missionaries, the late King, on his accession in 1863, refused to take the outh, and in the following year, notwithstanding the all but unanimous opposition of the natives, led by two or three missionaries, he abrogated it by proclamation, drew up a new one less democratic, fusing the two. Even at the present time, it should be understood. the Courts of Judicature, internal administration in every detail, such as the educational, the police, and prison systems, road management, &c., m'e those of the United States, and I must admit that they work extremely well. The Federal Government at Washington has shown hiherto every consideration for the independence of the islands. Whatever influences have been at work so far in favour of an- tf 1671 Hongkong, Shanghai, Cologne (Germany.) nexation have emanated from a portion of the American residents at Honololu and other places in the kingdom. The only approach to any action on the part of the United States Government of which I have ever known, for To H. J. H. THE GRAND DUKE ALEXIS OF acquiring any territorial footing in the country was in 1867, when the American Minister Resident sounded the King on his willingness to sell one of the smaller is ands as a coaling station for the steamers about to run between San Francisco and Japan, and touch, as it was then proposed, at Honolulu. "I replied," the King told me, "that the islands were not for sale." An article in the late King's Constitution of 1864 thus provides for the succession :- If the King has no bereditary successor, he nominates during his life one of the high Alijs (Ohiefs) who shall then be approved by the House of PEDDER'S WHARF, HONGKONG. Nobles (the Upper Chamber to which I have referred as usually citting with the Lower), and the person thus chosen by the King and Nobles shall be the lawful successor to the throne. But what if, as in the present instance, the King dies without such nomination of a successor? Then the Cabinet Ministers are ex officio Regents during the interregoum. HEAVEN BY LITTLES. Heaven is not reached at a single bound; But we build the ladder by which we rise From the lowly earth to the vaulted skies. And we mount to its summit round by round

I count these things to be grandly true ! That a noble deed is a step toward God-Lifting the soul from the common sod To a purer air and a broader view.

We rise by the things that are under our feet. By what we have mastered of greed and gain, By the pride deposed and the passion slain, And the vanquished ill that we liourly meet,

We hope, we resolve, we aspire, we trust, When the morning only to life and light; But our hearts grow weary, and ere the night i their very worst. The entire body of Our lives are trailing the tordid dust. Wings for the angels, but feet for the men We must borrow the wings to find the way We may hope, and resolve, and aspire, and pray, with nothing before me but night and the But our feet must rise or we fall again.

Only in dreams is a ladder thrown From the weary earth to the sapphire walls; But the dreams depart and the vision falls, And the sleeper wakes on his pillow of stone.

Heaven is not reached at a single bound, But we build the ladder by which we rise From the lowly earth to the vaulted skies,

As I reached the beach, and commenced to strap on my skates, the sky bore strong evidence of a coming storm; in fact, a howling blast had already set in from the southern or land side. The ice was smooth, unbroken, and free from snow, and, though strong enough for men, was not safe for horse or sleigh. Just as I started, I perceived, even at that distance, a solitary figure proceeding along the pier to the place of des- | Agents for the above Company, are pretination, and this proved to be Durby him- pared to accept Marine Risks and issue Policies and to see that their names are upon the wrapper, labels, self, as I afterwards ascertained. I had to lean against it as against a falling wall with all my strength, which rendered my progress rather slow. I then perceived, when too late, that with all my cleverness I had taken rather too wide an "offing," and should have the greatest difficulty in reaching the lighthouse at all. To make matters still worse, a thin but hard round sleet began to fall, which blinded me. and even at that period filled me with anxiety, if not alarm. Now that I was under weigh, however, I bore up against the difficulty as bravely as I could, and had got within, perhaps, three quarters of a mile of the lighthouse, when I perceived others moving along the pier towards the same point evidently with great difficulty, and at the same time making the most frantic gestures with their arms, plainly indicating danger of some unusual kind, and that, too, in my di- pany, are prepared to grant Marine risks at rection, although as yet invisible to myself. | current rates. Dense crowds gathered along the beach, and just as I began to find that with all my strength I was being borne beyond the lightwhouse, a terrific shock, which for a moment mocked the voice of the hurricane, caused the entire surface of the ice to quiver as with an earthquake, and flung me prostrate on my face, whilst a loud and reverberating roar echood in my ears, and leaned like "the live thunder" from point to point, until it was lost in the distance and wild tuniult of the storm. I have traversed since then the four quarters of the earth; I have seen the hickory, and the cak, and the pine shivered into matches with the lightning before my face; I have seen the strong masts of a ship snapped off like pipe-stems, and flung into the surge; I have stood when an earthquake roared and scattered death and ruin above and around me; but never yet have I heard such a sound as that, nor perhaps, until "the crack of doom!" In a moment I was on my feet again, liey. and comprehended at last the danger of iny position. The great body of ice had yielded to the immense pressure of the wind (the centre of the lake being, as I said, open), and split along the coast close to me; and, should I not regain my position on the land side of the chasm thus made, and that, too, at once, I should be borne across the entire width of Lake Erie-at least eighty miles !- to the shores of British America; that is to say, the field whereon I stood were not broken up into minute fragments by the combination of wind and wave. There is no mistake about Lake Erie in those respects; for I have since discovered that the storm-demons have made its comparatively small surface a sort of trysting-place -a small stage of rehearsal for their grander performances around the Cape of Good Hope and Cape Horn. What a prospeet for me, then, on a wild night, with the frost already beginning to pierce my very marrow! Alas! they cheered and hoped in vain. The cchoes thundered for miles along the beach, and once more I staggered, but did not fall. ward I struggled until I reached edge of the second chasm, and saw that this time the winds had, indeed, done parted from the American shore! and I was rapidly borne upon its death-chilling surface towards the Canadas, waves, with the Ice-King and the Storm-King for my royal companions.
